They have a lot of problems to fix. The Good: 1) The New Goaltending Petr Mrazek has been great this season, and has carried a team that has been missing the goaltending depth they have been accustomed to in the past. But he has a cap-hit of more than $6 million this season, and when it was put to the Kings at the deadline that he was likely to be bought out of the remaining year, they opted to go with the young, cheaper Jonathan Quick instead. Quick has stepped in and performed quite well, stopping 77 of 79 shots in the two games he played following the trade. He stopped 46 shots on Friday night alone. In the past, they could lean on the experience of Jonathan

Bernier to come in and muck it up against an opponent, or Ron Hextall to sit on a hot hand and bail Quick out when he started to struggle. With Quick in the crease, Bernier and Hextall have become non-factors. Quick has been great, and is a solid goaltender at the best of times. It's a start, and they'll have to hope that he grows into what they hoped he would be, or is able to perform what they need out of him when the games matter the most. 2) Jordan Nolan
Jordan Nolan is coming along as a coach. He obviously has the pedigree, but he also seems to understand how to get the best out of his players. He's doing that with Nolan Kopitar, and he's doing f678ea9f9e
